Life and Adventures

OF

Capt. John Avery,

THE

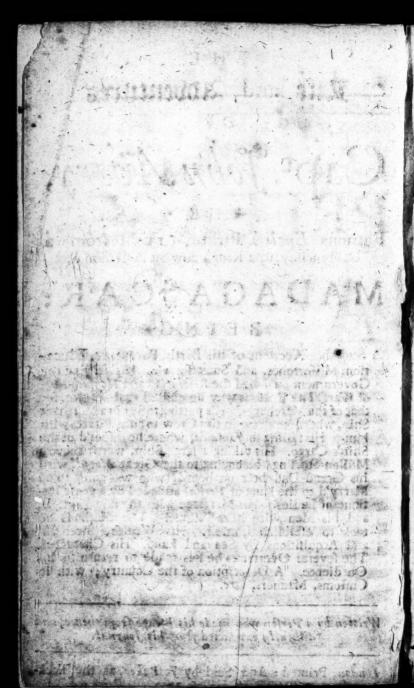

Famous English Pirate, (rais'd from a Cabbin-Boy, to a King) now in Possession of MADAGASCAR:

BEING

A Succinct Account of his Birth, Parentage, Education Misfortunes, and Successes, via. His fersing the Government on Board the Refolution and Nonfuch Men of War. The Reasons why he quitted that Service, for that of the Merchants. His putting to Sea in a Merchant Ship, where he drew in the Crew to turn Pirates with him. His failing to Jamaica, where he disposed of the Ship's Cargo. His taking a large Ship, worth above Million Sterling, belonging to the Great Mogul, with his Grand-Daughter on Board, (who was going to be Marry'd to the King of Persia) attended by a great Retinne of Ladies. His Marriage with the faid Princels. and his Men with her Retinue. The Methods he took to establish himself. His Wealth, Strength, and Acquifitions by See and Land. His Character The feveral Overnires he has made to return to his Obedience: A Description of the Country; with its Cuftoms, Manners, Obc.

Written by a Perfor who made his Escape from thence, and fully been called from his Journal.

t

THE

PREFACE.

S Prefaces are necessary where the Credit of any Memoir is hable to be cal led in Question, so it may not be improper to give the Reader one at this functure, who, from the many Impositions of this Nature, will be apt to suspend bis Belief concerning Things for remotely transacted, and Persons so obscure and imperceptible in their Padice. Who is this pretended Anthor, that made bis Escape from Madagascare Says one. How came he to be let into the Captain's inmost Secrets? cries another, and every one gives bimfelf a Liberty concerning a Writer that that is justly said, by the late Dr. Sherlock, to lie down, while every Reader takes a Priviledge in censuring what he buys, which is really his own by that Purchase, and hits him a Kick in the Briteh, to make him exercise his Faculty of Feeling.

To gratify such curious Enquiries as these, and prepossess the Publick against all manner of scrupulous Objettions, it is, to know that the Author of this small Treatise is one Adrian Van Broeck, a Dutch Gentleman, who, after a very liberal Edicention at Leyden, apply'd bimfelf, as Men of the best Fashion in Holland do, to the Bufiness of Trade. This Application, rubich be made to the Satisfaction of all that be death with, made bin known to the Gospinars of the Dutch East India Company, who, in order to encourage for much Defent, made bim Supercargo to one of their outward bound Ships, very richly laden, call'd the Zealand, with Letters recommenda-

h

0 bi

fa

For

af

tory for a profitable Employ, when he should arrive at Batavia.

y ly ts

ke

es

ck.

b-

11-

4-

eu-

H,

4

là.

to

de

m hia.

ge

nd

be

100

But Fortune, that is not always in Friendship with those who deserve it, suffer at this Ship to spring a Leak, and founder at Sea, near the Island of St. Hellena, tho the Crew made their Escape in their Pinnaces and Long Foats; among the rest, Adrian Van Broeck, who had lost very considerably of his own by this Disaster, came ashore, and, after Application to the Governor, got another Ship upon the Company's Account, and so made the best of his Way for Batavia.

Let, notwithstanding the Danger he had just before escap'd from, and the Treasure this Type of Inconstant of had made the devouring Sea rob him of, he was to full under another Disappointment more severe than the former, which was, to be intercepted in his Koyage by Pirates, that were some of Capt. Avery's Band, and, after plundering him of his ready Money, Money, which confisted of some thousand Dollars, brought him and his Ship and Company into Madagascar; where, being had before the Captain, to be examin'd about his Circumstances, and the Affairs of Europe, the Captain contracted such an Esteem for him, as not call to offer him a free Residence with him, but such a Share in his new-creeted Government, as he should think sit to accept of.

Ce

a

ne

ly los

e/vb

ate

ute

2

Van Brock was by no Means to incur his Displeasure and ill Will, by a Denial, wherefore he laid hold of his Offer, and was admitted into his most secret Thoughts, which gave him Occasion to know such a part of these Memoirs, as his Birth, Education, Marriage, &c. which he was not an Eye-Witness to.

But as generous and liberal Spirits cannot long down with dishonourable Proclices, so this Gentleman could no longer brook an Abode amongst this Nest of Thieves, than Necessity requir'd, and laying bold of the English East India Man, whom the Sequel of these Memoirs will tell us to be dismiss'd in Safety, with a Letter to the Governor of Fort St. George, be got on Board with his Effects, which confifted of Money which Avery had plentifully flord bim with, by Stealth in the Nightseason; and so, after staying some Time in the English Settlements, got Cafely to Batavia, where he now lives possess'd of a very good Post, phich he was before recommended to.

ーーから

1,

d

to

to

by

of 225 ve

of

ca-

vas

What remains after this, is, to infruer some Objections which may be nade to the Truth of it, from his nentioning nothing of this in the Boy of the Memoirs; and this may be lone by referring the Reader to the est Writers of this kind, such as rits Cæsar in bis Commentaries, &c. able who industriously pass over what red no ates to themselves, unless an absothis ute Necessity requires it. Besides, ir'd would very much take off from the viri The Preface.

Opinion of our Author's Judgment and Qualifications, to introduce any Thing relating to himself in a History that treats of nothing but unjustifiable Principles and Practices.

To keep the Reader no longer from entering into the House, by detaining him in the Porch, he has nothing to do, but to go in and make himself welcome; where, tho' he will find no Dainties, or Luxuriance of Stile to seed upon, he'll have that the Gods themselves were pleas'd with at a homely Entertainment at Baucis's and Philemon's, if the Poet saith Truth by his Super omnia Vultus accessore boni.

restioning noticing of this in the Bovol the filemeirs, and this may be one by referring the Lender to the reft Vrites of this kind, find as atlar in his Commentaries, Oc.
H Thauftriously pass over what neites to themselves, whiless an obsote Necessity requires it. Besides, would very much to be of from the m

in

m

th

any ory T 1

ining felf find tile

the baters's

tus

H

THE

LIFE

OF

Capt. Avery.

S Truth is more necessary towards enlightening Matters purely Historical, than the Embelishments of Stile, and a naked Simplicity more suits this Truth, than those ornamental Advantages which are wanting to set off Falsehoods and Romantick Relations, the Writer of these Memoirs, who is perfectly well known to the Person that gives Being

Being to 'em, has thought fit to entertain his Reader with none of those Flourishes our modern Annalists and Historians abound with, but, without assuming to himself any of their Airs, lays Things before him without any other Dress, than the Gentleman he is now going to treat of, had when his Mother first brought him into the World.

Capt. John Avery was born at Plymouth, a noted Sea-port Town in Devonsbire, in the Year 1653, and rather descended from Parentsnoted for their Industry, than Birth. His Father had fpent feveral Years of his Life in the Service of the Crown, with his Fellow-Townsman Admiral Blake; but, meeting with little Encouragement, and finding a total Defection from the Royal Cause in the beginning of the late Civil War, chose rather to abandon his dearest Friend and Country-man, than his Sovereign Lord, to

of

a-

h, lf

es,

er

ıt

n

3, ts-

n

eıt,

t,

g

d

n

Lord, he betook himself to the Merchants, under whom, by his prudent and careful Demeanor, he got a competent Estate, and the Reputation of a very able Sea-man. His Mother, who had the Care of the young Infant during her Hufband's Absence in foreign Parts, was not behind-hand with him in her Industry at Home, but took fuch Care of the Son as might one Day render him posses'd of the Abilities of the Father; but unfortunately dying while her Huthand was at Sea, and her Son in the fixth Year of his Age, left him to the Direction of a Sifter of her's, one Mrs. Norris, who was an Inhabitant of the same Town with pole, Nave had and wated in the

This Aunt of his, who was a Widow, and had no Children of her own, surpassed the Mother (if it was possible) in Tokens of Assections, and, finding him of a very forward Genius, took fuch Care of his Education, as was proper for a Child, of whom she had conceiv'd fuch promiting Hopes; and, having put him to School, had the Satisfaction not only of feeing him out-strip those of his own Years, but those that had been born some Years before him. But here, as if Fate pointed out the Grandeur and Wealth-which should in Process of Time (unfortunately) arrive at, he gave Indications of fuch a daring and commanding Genius, as made fome of his little School-fellows very uneafy, and give in many Complaints against him for his tyrannical Treatment. Though their Complaints were to no Purpole, Nature had eradicated in him a Thirst of Empire; and Obedience to his Superiors was as little conforant to his Character, as a moderate and obliging Behaviour to his Inferiors, at / of thor as affices, and, finding hun of a vere er

B. 2

ry

n-d, ne

m

5, 1e

if

d

of

le g le

75 y

h i-

ea

r

The Mafter heard and faw all this, and chaftis'd him to no Pur-. pofe. At last the Father return'd Home, and being content with the Fortunes he had happily acquir'd, wifely refolv'd to tempt the Inconflancy of the Seas no more, but to caft Anchor in a Port that would render him fecure from all the Dangers the Winds and Waves had before threaten'd him with. To put thefe Refolutions in Practice, he perchas'd upwards of eight Score Pounds a Year near Plymouth, at a Place call'd Cat-Down, a fort of an Eminence over-looking an Arm of the Sea, which, by various Mæanders and Windings, runs feveral Miles into the Country, and takes its Name from a Mountain or Down, which at once fwells above, and defends it from the infults of tempeltuous Weather. Thot moch

Here the brave old Man took up his Residence, and after having B.3 liv'd

liv'd to see the Royal Family reflor'd in the Person of that August Monarch, King Charles the Ild, and his Country deliver'd from the Usurpations it had tyrannically labour'd under for many Years, sung his Nunc dimittis, and gave up his Soul, March the 14th 1663, into the Hands of him that gave it him.

Now was our young Pirate just entering into the eleventh Year of his Age, and once more under the immediate Care of his Aunt, who was appointed for his Guardian, together with Mr. Bartholomew Knowles, a. Sea-faring Person, who was equally rich with old Avery, but not equally honest, as the Sequel will give us to understand. His Aunt liv'd with him under the Capacity of a Truftee for about four Years, when being of a very great Age, she gave Way to the Decleniions of Nature, and paying Obedience to the Laws of Morpossessed of 500 L more than he had before her Decease.

1

ft

d,

1-

g

is 0 n.

ft

of 10

10

n,

w

1

4-

as

r-

m

or to

y-

Mr. Knowles being now sole Executor, and those Impediments removed, by his Aunt's Death, which hinder'd him from putting those evil Designs in Practice, which he had long projected; what does he to compass them, but by giving Way to those Inclinations he saw most predominant in his Ward, encourage him in his Desires to go aboard a Fleet of Men of War that was thengoing to suppress the Nest of Pirates at Algiers.

Avery, for his Part, took this as an Earnest of his Indulgence, and being vested with the Character of a Reformade by the King's Letter, he set Sail from Phymouth with the Squadron that was order'd out for the Purposes before mention'd; where we shall leave him, to see how

*

T

1

1

1

t

1

1

f

f

A fe

dh

V

g

Q.

how his Guardian bestew'd his Time in his Absence, who husbanded it as well as Villany could instruct him, by the following Method:

ecution, and these summing an

There was a neighbouring Attorney, with whom he had contraded an intimate Acquaintance, (I will not say Friendship, for that's an Appellation no ways familiar to Men of evil Dispositions and Characters) and who had as true a Tafte as himself of Things forbidden by the Laws of God and Man. This Backflider, in noverint Universis, knew as well how to forge Deeds, as his Brother in Iniquity how to persuade him to it, and it took not up much Labour, but Conveyances were made, and other Inftruments drawn; which entitled Knowles to the Possession of the Estate at Cat-Down, exclusive of the lawful Proprietor. A hundred Pounds for his Pains, removed his ved all Difficulties, and neither the uf- Violation of Things facred and uld civil after fuch a delicate Morfel, Me- put the least Rub in his Way. As for the five hundred Pounds, he had no manner of Consultation aor- bout getting of them into his Hands, ra- they were already in 'em, and a (I good round Bill of Sharges would it's foon make him Master of that Sum, to without any Fear of the Equity of ia- his Ward's Pretences.

ec

a id-

ın. ni-

ge

ity it

ut

ler

ti-

of

ve

n-

0-

ed

In the mean while, young Avery shews an uncommon Readiness in the Practice of Maritine Affairs, and not only gets into the Esteem of the Officers of his Majefty's Ship the Refolution, which he ferv'd aboard, but of the Commadore Rear Admiral Lawfon, and having exerted an extraordinary Vigour and Sprightliness while Algiers was reduc'd to Reason by the Terror of the English Navy, begg d of his Captain to let him ferve in the

the same Quality as he did in his I Ship, aboard another Vessel that in was order'd with three more to be ro detach'd for the West Indies, where or the Spaniards began to be trouble- or fome to our foreign Plantations ; ru which was immediately granted re him, as a Token of the good Will w that Commander bore him, and an he Encouragement to his future Pro-er gress in the Art of Navigation.

D

But I must not carry him from C aboard the Refolution, to the None- of fuch, (for that was the Ship he was ar to go to the Indies in) before I give H the remarkable Occurrence which IN claims a Share in this History, by which is this; It being a Custom N for the Reformades, especially those in which are most in the good Graces to of the Commanding Officer, todine his with the Captain, it was his good ed Fortune to be one of em, while of they were taking in Provision at B the Port of Cadiz, and the second w Lieuhis Lieutenant of the Ship being then nat invited also to Table; they fell be to Gaming, as is usual, for want of ere other Diversion, after Dinner, and le- our young Tarpawlin had the Forstrune to strip this Officer of the ted ready Money he was Master of, and ill would not play with him after, as an he was desir'd, upon Honour. This ro-enrag'd the Lieutenant to the last Degree, who vow'd Revenge, not being able to accomplish it in the Captain's Presence, where no Breach of the Peace was to be committed, vas and the profoundest Respect was due. we He therefore took Occasion next ch Morning to shew his Resentment y, by a Bastinado, for a pretended om Neglect in the Reformade's not doofe ing his Duty; who not being able ces to brook a Blow that was given ine him foundeservedly, having watchod ed the Lieutenant ashore, got Leave ile of his Officer likewife to have the at Boat mann'd out and go ashore, and where he found his Antagonist; and euafter

C

V

0 n

the last

I

f

h Cro P

after calling him to Account for Satisfaction, had it in wounding him in feveral Places, for which he was confin'd at his returning on Board again, for some Time, but afterwards dismiss'd with Applause for his gallant Behaviour, when his Captain came to be inform'd of the true State of the Case.

We have no Room to question, but this fortunate and daring Adventure flush'd him with Expectations of Success in his future Encounters, and gave Additions to a Courage that stood in need of no Access to it. But to be as concise as we can in our Narration, without any Digressions by Way of Remarks, let it fuffice, that we bring him in the Commadore's Ship before Port Royal in Jamaica; where, being of an active Genius, while the Veffels of War were careening, he grew impatient of fome other Exploit, and put himself aboard for ng ch

on ut

ise en

id

n,

d-

a-

11-

a 10

fe

h-e-ig e-e, le g, er

rd a Quest of Plunder, and was so fortunate as to return to famaica with some Ingots of Gold and Silver to his Share; but as he was of an expensive Temper, it did not long stay with him, but went among the Inhabitants, to make appear, that he was not only a perfect Sailor in the Knowledge of Things relating to the Sea, but also very readily vers d in the Practices of those that use it, upon the Account he was then embark d in.

Here he stay'd cruizing and securing the Commerce in those Seas, for the Space of two Years, when the Commodore being recall'd home, he was oblig'd to set Sail for his Country; at which he was no sooner arriv'd, but he found his Guardian dead, and himself disposses'd not only of his Estate, but Aunt's Legacy, by a pretended Deed of Conveyance, and Bill of Charges. Whom to have Recourse to in these Extremities, he knew not. At last, having received the Pay that was due to him from the Ship, he commenced a Suit against Knowles his Executors, but all to no Purpose; for what by the Treachery of his own Lawyers, and what by the Pre-possession of the Judges in his Adversary's Favour, he found himself brought under the Necessity of going to Sea again, by losing his Favour.

tlahrvvti

And here an Opportunity offer'd for his being employ'd, and revenge himself upon his Country's Enemies, for the Perfidies of his pretended Friends, King Charles the IId had declar'd War against the Dutch for several Incroachments on his Royal Prerogative, and a Fleet was going to Sea to do his Majesty Justice for those Injuries. Among the Rest that made Application

r-

to

t.

at 10 es

アッツのもに

s s s a s

n

cation for Preferment on this Occasion, Avery was one that attended the Board of Admiralty; but his Fortunes being lost, his former Favours were vanished also; and though he had served so long under a more genteel Character, he found himself obliged to submit to a Foremast-man's Place a board the Edgar, where he continued during that whole War in no other Capacity, than having the Satisfaction of being serviceable to his King and Country.

When both Parties were weary of fighting, they began then more feriously to enter into the Causes of their Enmity; which not being thought sufficient to justify it on either Side, occasion'd a Treaty of Peace between two Nations, that had been beaten enough to make 'em take Care how they fell together by the Ears again for the sufficient. This returns our Champion C. 2. back back again of Course to the Place of his Nativity, where having some Interest, though he had none with the Conncil to his Royal Highness the Dake of York, then Lord High Admiral, he prevailed with some Merchants of Totnes and Plymouth, upon a Ship's being bound for the West Indies, to be her Commander, and was so fortunate in her, as to perform several Voyages for his Owners with all imaginable Success.

The Places he traded to for the Merchants, were chiefly the Leeward Islands; but his Genius being active and enterprizing, he made bold to fail farther, and went to the Bay of Campeachy, where he cut down a considerable Quantity of Log-wood, traffick'd with the Spaniards, and return'd Home with very rich Cargo.

a

1 ſ

b ta

(

t

C

t

I

a

1

(

t

1

£

ace

ome

refs igh

me

tb,

he

er,

to nis

C-

he

ee-le

to le

y

e h

The Merchants look'd upon him: as a lucky and bold Commander, his Courage had been try'd upon rith feveral Occasions, and his Conduct been render'd irreproachable, thro' the many happy Refults of it, as all his Behaviour was with as much Gallantry as could be expected from the most resolute Sailor on the Ocean. Nor did he, by feveral other Acts of Prudence and Justice, miss of their Esteem who trusted and employ'd him; for indeed, to fpeak impartially of this Captain, he had been worthy of a very great Character, if he had made Use of those excellent Qualities, which he was in an eminent Manner Mafter of, for the Benefit of his Country, as he afterwards manag'd them for its Disadvantage.

'Tis with a great deal of Address and Difficulty, that fome very able Politicians make themselves belov'd and esteem'd by those they have-

C 3

16

t

i

A

g

a

t

t

2

V

e

(

8

1

t

1

I

have a Design upon; but Capt. Avery, without the least Uneasiness, had the Art of gaining the Affections of the Mariners, and shewing his Authority, without weakening their Inclinations for his having the Exercise of it; nay, our better Sort of Tarpawlins, that lay'd Claim to more distinguishing Apprehensions, view'd their Images, and doated upon themselves in the Survey of his.

He was, as to his Proportion, middle-fiz'd, inclinable to be fat, and of a gay jolly Complexion. His Manner of living, was imprinted in his Face, and none that faw him, but might have easily told his Profession, without making Application to John Partridge, Isaac Bickerstaff, or any other Astrologer in Christendom, for a Scheme to know it by. His Temper was of a Piece with his Person, daring and goodhumour'd, if not provok'd, but insolent,

A-

efs.

ti+ ng

ng

ng

etb'v

pes.

he

III.

m.

it,

lis ed

W

is i-

C-

in

W

ce d-

0-

t,

lent, uneasy, and unforgiving to the last Degree, if at any Time impos'd upon. His Knowledge in Affairs relating to his Calling, was grounded upon a strong natural Judgment, and a fufficient Experience, that was highly advanc'd by an incessant Application to the Mathematicks; and notwithstanding the Remissness of his Education and Converse in his Minority, he had many Principles of Morality, which fince his Defection from an equitable Procedure, feveral of the Subjects belonging to the Crown of Great Britain, have fufficiently experienc'd.

These Vertues, both natural and acquir'd, gain'd him a Reputation with the most intelligent Persons, that either apply'd themselves to Navigation, or had Dealings with those that did; and the most accurate in their Projections, had an Eye upon him, as one that might advance

E

S

V

CI P

D

u

(2

m

. D

fa tl

> V h

0 1]

to A

n tl

0

advance as far upon the Surface of m the Ocean, and make as fignal Difcoveries, as his Predecessors, the Admirals Drake and Hawkins, who had both, like him, been Inhabitants of Plymouth, and were rais'd from no higher Beginnings, than our modern Adventurer. distributed business and the constitution of

But Fate had decreed it otherwife, and he was just upon the Point of feeing himself a Great Man by honest Practices, when an unlucky Accident shipwreck'd his good Fortune, and occasion'd his being enroll'd in the Lift of Robbers himfelf, who had not long fince been plunder'd of his Patrimony, by bafe and indirect Meafures. Mod a multh wing of course astini dhia xil

It happen'd, that among other Passions he was subject to, that of Love was not the least; and he had pitch'd his Eyes upon a Farmer's Daughter, as one that would make make him happy in matrimonial Enjoyments after his Return from the Sea, from which those Pleasures avert their Face; and as his Circumstances were as agreeable to the Parents, as his Appearance to the Daughter, the Portion was agreed upon, and they were both marry'd, (as every one thought) to their mutual and lasting Contentment.

erhe eat

an iis bg

a-

3-

r

3

d

Tho' it prov'd, that the Farmer was none of the honestest, as his Daughter happen'd afterwards to fall under the Character of none of the chastest; for the first took Advantage of his Son-in-Law's taking his Word for his Daughter's Portion, and refus'd to pay him one Farthing, the last was hopefully brought to Bed of a champion Boy, six Months after the Bridal Night, as much like a certain Inn-keeper in the Town, as if it had been spit out of his Mouth.

Tis.

Tis easy to imagine such Disap-ul pointments as these, were enough has to set a Temper on Fire, that was his too sanguine to pocket such Abuses; wherefore, having withdrawn his Effects from Plymouth, and made ready Money of all he was Master of, he made the best of his Way for London, and gave a plain Indication, at his Arrival there, that his as Hatred and Aversion make us bloody-minded, so they teach us to dissemble, while he disguised his Thoughts, in order to put them made mischievously in Execution.

Here he had no sooner made the proper Reslexions on his Missortunes, and heartily curs'd the Authors of his Ruin, according to ancient Custom, but he put on very honest undesigning Looks, and apply'd himself once more to some Merchants, whose Service he had been formerly engag'd in, and for whom he had made many a successful.

dr

ap-jul Voyage. He pretended a more igh han ordinary Desire of repairing vas his Losses by Trade; and to that ou-Purpose assur'd them, that he would wn not only venture all the ready Mo-de nies he was already possess d of, but er whatever Goods his Stock of Repuay ation could purchase, after the un-nappy Accidents that had befallen iat him: Which Propegals were reaus fily clos'd with, and the Gentleto men apply'd to, not only fitted him nis out a Ship of 400 Tuns, ready m mann'd, victall'd, and freighted, but gave him Credit for several hundred Pounds, and made him Su-he percargo, as well as Commander.

u- This was as he could have wish'd, n- and the War between England and ry France raging at that Time, it afp- forded Capt. Avery a fair Opportune nity of providing his Ship with a ad far greater Number of Guns and or Men, than at any other Time would I- have appear'd necessary. Neither did

r-

ul

did the Pains he took to procure able Sailors upon this Occasion, and go fuch as were remarkable for their In Courage, give any Manner of Sufpicion to the Owners, but out he fail'd with as bold a Crew, as ever trusted themselves to Wind and Weather.

Wa

CII

66

66

66 66

56

46

46

46

66 46

46

66 46

66

46

46

66

66

40

46

The Reader is not to expect, that he touch'd at Plymouth, to fee his dear vertuous Wife, and his honest Promise-keeping Father-in-Law for he had quite different Sentiments, and the Dishonours of a violated nuptial Bed, the Pérjuries of a Guardian, and the Difregard shewn to facred Agreements, made him loath baving any other Commerce or Sight of Mankind, but fuch as launch'd out into the Deep with him, and fuch as he should for the future meet with, in order to be made Sacrifices to his Refentment and Ambition,

Elecent to asome

er ad

at

ft

5 ies d

le

1-ıt

p

r

5

His first Exploit, after he had ire nd got Sea-room, was, to found the it Inclination of his Men, for nothing if- was to be done without their Conhe currence. "He laid before em the " frequent Hazards they were ob-" lig'd to run, for no valuable Con-" fideration: That if they would " permit him to lead them on, he " promis'd one Day's resolute "Fight should make the Residue " of their Lives an uninterrupted " Scene of Pleafure: That it was " mere Madness to depend on the "Merchants, who fuffer'd the bra-" vest Fellows to grow old, lame, " and miserable in their Service, " without having any Regard to "their Labours: That 'twas an "equal Frenzy, to hazard all for "the Government, where, as he " had personally experienc'd, Pro-"motion feldom attended true "Merit; where the Insolence of "Commanders was infufferable, " and where the Tarpawlins of

" Honour

"Honour had nothing to expect for the Reward of their Wounds li

ar

CC

fo

ſe

in pi

2

h oi G

n

S

G

tl

h ol

S

E

t

de

a ra te

" and Bravery, but a poor Apart"ment in an unprovided Hospital,

" when Age and ill Usage had ren-

" der'd 'em unfit for farther Ser" vice.

With these, and such-like Arguments, drawn from the unfortunate Management of the Navy in those Days, and by perswading his Men, that they should meet with Mines richer than those of Potosi, he fo far prevail'd with 'em, that, one and all, they determin'd to adhere to his Resolutions. Thus, being well satisfy'd with their Confent to his Delign, he forthwith made the best of his Way to the Island of Jamaica, where he was not a little acquainted, (as the Reader has been before given to understand) and there dispos'd of that part of the Ship's Cargo which could be of no Use to him in his intended Voyage. But ct

ds

t-

1, 7-

r-

1-

n

is

h

t,

s,

h

e

IS

e

of

h

t

But an unlucky Accident had like to have marr'd his Project, and blafted a Defign which he had conceiv'd so hopeful an Opinion of, for the Person whom he had chofen for his Clerk and Steward, being appriz'd of the Matter, and puff'd up with the Expectation of a great Reward for the Discovery, had made an Agreement with one of the Ship's Crew, who was the Gunner's Mate, to go ashore the next Day, and make it known to Sir William Beefton, who was then Governor; but the Fellow whom this Resolution was concerted with, had fome Remorfe amidst his Want of it, and communicated the whole Secret to the Captain, who laid an Embargo on his trufty Servant, 'till they were out at Sea, and then decently truss'd him up, for being a Traytor to his trayterous and piratical Purpofes.

Being victuall'd afresh, he incited some Persons, who had bee n

D 2 Buccaneers,

Buccaneers, to join him, and with all imaginable Expedition, fet Sail to cruize in the Indian Sea; where, after an Oath taken of every individual Mariner, for Secreey in the Affair they were going in Persuit of, he tack'd about backwards and forwards for a confiderable Time. before any Prize of Value came in Sight. At last, Fortune, that intended to make him miserable, by being reputed happy, threw in his Way a Vessel of a great Burthen, for the carry'd near a thousand Men, with Guns proportionable, was freighted with the richest Merchandizes of all the East, and had got a Prize of greater Value about her, I mean a Grand-Daughter of Aurenzebe, who was then Great Mogul, and commanded an Empirealmost as extensive as any known Quarter of the World.

The Force of the Ship, and the vast Numbers of Soldiers that appear'd on its Deck, at first gave no fmall

fi

W fi

01

W

bi

CC B

W

te

th

to W tā as fo of

m di

as

th

fh fai

all

Ea

h iL

e, i-

ie

it

d

e,

17

1-

y 5 1,

d

t

t

1

small Uneasiness to Capt. Avery, who was loath to miscarry in his first Attempt, and seem'd doubtful of Success at the same Time as he was fet on Tip-toe to profecute it 5 but having recollected himself, he confider'd his own Strength, the Bravery of his Sea-men, and their wonderful Skill in naval Rencounters, while the Numbers of the others would rather be a Hinderance to 'em, than an Advantage, and the Want of being unexercis'd in military Affairs, render'd them as weak as they were numerous: Therefore he gave Orders for the Signal of Battel, and immediately commanded to bear down upon the Indians, and exerted fuch a Courage,_ as if he had prophetically known, that the Reward of his Victory should be the most charming of the fair Sex, and the most precious of all inestimable Things, that the East could present him with.

The English gave but a Broadside or two, when the Indians struck their Colours, and resign'd themselves to the Mercy of their Enemies. The Cargo of this Ship was so very rich, that it even satiated the Appetites of the most covetous of the Mariners; for above the Value of a Million of Money in Silver, and rich Stuffs, was found therein, and a very agreeable Lady into the Bargain.

The Captain no fooner beheld the Lady in Tears, but melted into Compassion, forgot those inhuman Resolutions he had taken at his Departure from England, and being of an amorous Disposition, notwithstanding his Wife had serv'd him the scurvy Trick before-mention'd, instead of ravishing the Princess, which some Accounts have made Mention of, pay'd the Respect that was due to her high Birth, took her and her Attendance into his own Ship, and after despoiling ip iu to

Proto ha

'S de fin

win C fh

no to

Licharde

to

le

k

1-:--

d

IS.

|-|-

d

y

d

- 11

1

8

9

2

spoiling the Vessel of all its Wealth, suffer'd it and its Crew to steer on to their intended Port.

It feems the Riches of the Ship was defign'd as a Portion for the Princess, and was fent as a Present to a Persian Potentate, who never had the Fortune to enjoy the glittering Cargo, nor his intended Spoule; for the Captain had plunder'd her of fomething more pleafing than the Jewels, though not without her own Confent, and being join'd in Marriage, after the Custom of those Foreigners, for the had a Priest with her, who did that Office after her Country's Manner; and Avery was e'en contented to dismiss the Scruples of his being marry'd after the Church of Enga land Method, out of Complaifance to fo defireable a Creature.

The rest of the Ship's Crew drew Lots for her Servants, and to sollow the Example of their Commander, even stay'd their Stomachs till

fo

Si

th

it

he

hi

hi

W

th

tu

H

W

m

w

22

77

W

S

H

for them that did it for their Mafler, when they fell to as heartily, as if they were to feast after that Rate no more during their Lives; and being full of Wealth, when they were almost empty of Love, came in Sight of the Island of Madagascar.

This Exploit of theirs having reach'd the Mogul's Ears in a short Time after, he immediately caus'd three hundred thousand Men to advance towards the English Settlements, by Way of Reprilals; but the India-Company being appriz'd of his Resentments, stopt his Anger with Presents, 'till they could give Notice to their Correspondents in England, who bought Dr. D-nt a fine Gown to appear in as their Ambaffador at the Mogul's Court; but the Doctor was either too fearful to venture his Carcafs where it might not be safe, or too intent on a Place which he had in view at Home, to go ice fo far to feek for it Abroad, though la- Sir William Norris bravely accepted the Employment, and went thro' it with a Courage peculiar to his heroick Family.

ly,

at S; en

e, 2-

g

rt d

-

t

3

The Mogul, at his Arrival into his Territories, not only defray'd his Charges, but fent him Home with rich Presents, though he had the Misfortune to die in his Return thither, and not bring em Home to his Family in Person; which shews, that a covetous Prince minds Money more than Confanguity, and makes the Maxim good, That Princes have no Relations, while either the Extent of their Territories are concern'd, or the Augmentation of their Treasures.

To return to Madagascar, where we left our triumphant Heroe and Lover, with the rest of his Adventurers. They were no fooner in Sight of the Island, but whole Troops of Inhabitants came down to the Shore, in order to take a

Survey

tha

on and

Eu

Sig

a.c

Sp

th ur

an

W

al

tw

OU

Pi

vi

C

66

"

..

"

..

66

..

Survey of the Ship, and the People he brought with him. The Captain was somewhat startl'd at so numerous an Appearance, but being told of the Fertility of the Island by some of the Buccaneers, and the Disposition of its Inhabitants, sent some of em with a Flag of Truce, and Presents for their chief Commanders, who no some receiv'd them, but with Expressions of Joy after their Way, conducted em to their King.

Their Prince's Residence was about three Miles off from the Shore, which was surrounded, after the manner of the Eastern People, and made up of great Numbers of Huts. Here they found drawn up in a Semicircle about a thousand arm'd Men, and in the Midst of 'em sat down on a Carpet crosslegg'd three Persons, who seem'd superior to the rest by their Habit and Looks. The Middlemost was the Chief, and the other two that at

-0

he

ut

he

s,

1-ag

ir

1-

[-

1-

3-

e, le

d

f pd

f

that fat at a convenient Distance on each Side of him, his Brother, and Prime Minister of State. The Europeans were no sooner come in Sight, but the little Army made a difinal Cry, and brandish'd their Spears in the Air, in a feemingly threatning Posture; which they understood afterwards by Means of an Interpreter, was design'd as a Welcome to Court. In an Instant, all was Attention and Silence, and two or three Officers of State step'd out of their Ranks to conduct the Pirates to Audience; who, having paid their Respects in their Country Manner, told him, "The "Occasion of their coming into "those Parts, was for the Wealth, "and Advantage of the Country; "that their Commander was a ve-" ry powerful and great Man, and " having receiv'd fome Injuries "from the Potentates of Europe, " was in Search of a Place conve-"nient, from whence he might moleft

" molest 'em in the most sensible we "Part, which was, that of Trade; East and that his Arrival in those gr "Parts, would not only make w "him a Prince fomidable to his un " Neighbours, but all the World te would come into an Alliance th "with their Master, and defire to ab make Settlements in his Terri-w. "tories. His Majesty, after ha- and ving been told, by his chief Minister, the Purport of their Errand, be gave them to understand, that an ti Alliance with fo great a Commander, would be very welcome; and that he himself would, after due Preparations for his Reception, go in Person and attend him to Court; and having given Orders for their Entertainment, and shewn his great Satisfaction in the Present, which were but Trifles, rose up, and retir'd, as is usual with the Oriental Princes, to converse with his Wives. In the mean Time, Capt. Avery, to lose no Time, fet all Hands at 00,0

25 te

W

o tl h

te al

W

work

ole work in founding the Bay of the e s East fide of this Island, in 15 Der ofe grees 30 Minutes South Latitude, ke which was large and capacious, and his unexposed to the Fury of the most ld tempeltuous Weather. Towards ce the bottom of it, lies a finall land, to about ten Miles in Circumference, ri- whole Land round it being high and woody, makes it a fure Profeani- ction for all Vessels which anchor'd beneath; and here he cholese cond, tinue till the Return of his Mellant an gers, who made him the Report as 11-nd ue as good as his Word in a Day st go two after, and came very pobly att 3 tended to invite the Captain alaofe, ir who received him under a Discharge at of all his Artillery, and with all ch the Respect due to a Person of the Chighest Character; and having enel al tertain'd him and his Rotinue with 39. all Things the Ship afforded, which y, was of an aftonishing Bulk to the at Infidels. rk Infidels, very frankly accepted of his Invitation, and went ashore, where he found a Treatment that was uncommon with Barbarians, and made him assured, that he was not the only European that had touch'd upon those Ports.

Here the two Potentates (for we must, after this Interview, share the Government of this fide of the World between them) enter'd into a perperual Alliance, and having regal'd themselves after an extraordinary manner, Ripulated to stand by each other with all their Forces; when the Captain return'd to his Ship, in order to take Poffestion of the Place which was intended for his Aboad, and was the Island we just now told the Reader of, and on which, after mooring his Vessel, he landed with all his Crew, but fuch as were absolutely necessary to look after her.

In the first place, what he had to do, was, to cause all the Plunder

ne

he

an

de

ac

w

B

di

y

A

V

E

a

f

C

t

1

of

e, at

s,

as

id

re

e

le

0 g

d

3

S

f

T

e đ

1,

t

0

O

r

e

he had got, to be brought alhore, and take Care that an exact Dividend should be made of the whole, according to the Law of Rivates, who, though they make it their Business to prey on Persons of a different Life and Conversation, yet among themselves observe the strictest Rules of Justice.

He had no fooner disposid of his Affairs, to the general Satisfaction, cur'd his fick Men, and careen'd his Veffel, but he embark'd again, having left part of his Crew, with the Women, alhore, to look after fresh Booty, and fet Sail for the neighbouring Isles, which lay contiguous and interspers'd in those Seas, not far from one another; some of which were of dangerous Access, others afforded convenient Harbours, but all of 'em in general were found to abound with most Necessaries of Life, as what were wanting feem'd rather defign'd to oblige the Luxurious, than to an-E 2 fwerfwer the Demands of a reasonable

1

C

•

.

.

t

I

-

1

1

1 uf

1

5

T

1

1

Appetite.

During this Cruize, in which he took two Moorish Vessels, and an English East India Ship outward bound, and very richly laden, he had Time to consider of his past Lafe and Conduct, and confult with mindelf for his future Safety. He debated what Course was most prober for him to take: To return into England, was dangerous; all the World were his Enemies, and if he escaped the Danger of the Seas on fuch a Voyage, he had Reafon to believe he should perish at Land. These Reasons induc'd him to be fix'd in his Refolves, to chuse the Place he had left the Women and Plunder in, for a Retreat, fince none could be more proper than those very Hes about which he was then cruizing, their Scituation for Trade lying as it were between the Fast and West Indian Seas.

object the Luxuriou, than to an-

he

an ird he aft

ith He

-01

112he

23

d.

be

he

bc

ce

111

26 16

re

11 ır

ble Their Neighbourhood to several Spice Islands, the Civility of their Inhabitants, their Diffance from Europe, and the Plenty of Provisions that were found therein, powerfully induc'd him to fettle here a Colony, which feem'd to be fecure enough from all the Attempts that the Universe could make against it. Refolv'd upon this Medium to avoid future Dangers, after having taken another Prize, which was full of French-Men, defign'd for the fame Exploits which he was then in the Exercise of, he communicated his Thoughts not only to his Ship's Orew, but fucle of his Prifoners as were English or French; and at the fame Time affur'd them, that fuchwho difliked his Proposal, were at Liberty to retire aboard one of the Ships which he would furnish them: with.

The Captain's Generosity was fovery much applauded, that very few, either English or French, except

E 3

the

I

in

E

C

TSOF

1

7

1

8

the Commanders of the East India Ship, and part of his Crew, made the last Offer their Choice. The French, for their parts, being fenfible that they were one and all in his Power, thought it rather Prudence to share his Fortune, than for him to make himself Master of theirs, and more than supply'd the Room of those Sailors that were for returning into their own Countries, the most of the English tarmy'd with their Commander, and landed with all Materials necessary to build a Fort with, for their mutual Defence. vine for entrand I

This they effected in a little Time, and having placed feveral great Guns upon it, and forty eight Pieces of Cannon they had taken out of the East India Ship, for the Security of their Persons and Effects, and call'd it by the Name of Fort Avery, in Honour of their Leader, but as Bulwarks and Artillery were not able to preserve this

lia

de

hic

n-

in uor

of

he re

n-

r-

d ry

u-

le

al

d

P,

S

re

of

d

e

Laws and Institutions necessary for its Well-being and Continuance, feveral new Customs and Ordinances were proposed, and consented to by the Generality of the Rovers, conducive as they imagin'd necessary for the Preservation of their new State; and Avery was with abundance of Ceremony chosen and confirm'd in the Dignity of being their Chief, with such a Power as the Doges or Dukes of Venice and General are now possess of Venice and General are now possess of the confirmation of their chief.

After this Republick of Pirates had thus order'd all Things to their Satisfaction, those who had Leave to retire, were shipp'd for the Western Islands in one of the Moorish Vessels, and part of Avery's new Subjects remain'd upon the Island, while the other weigh'd Anchor from thence, in Search of new Adventures, under the Command of Monsieur de Sale, who was next in Power to the new Duke, who, for his

be

fi

Q

b ſh

it

t

f. e

e

of an all

his part, with his other Companions, who had Women for their Shares, gave himself up to the Caresses of his new Princess.

As Time obliterates the most deep Impressions of Sorrow, so the Lady was not long before the forgot the Pleasures of her Grand-father's Court, in the Joys of her own, and found her felf happily brought to Bed of a Son foon after her Hufband's being invested with her new Dignity, while the Female part of her Retinue were no less backward in presenting their Husbands with the Fruits of their conjugal Endearments. But the the Commander in Chief, with admall Number of his Followers, had thele Advantages, the rest of 'em were Strangers to Venereal Enjoyments, and being Masters of the same Passions, were under a Restraint of being Strangers to the fame Priviledges; wherefore it was refolv'd, nemine contradicente, that a Supply should. be hr-

eir

a-

A

he

ot

3 d

0

6-

W

f

d

h.

r

f

be granted, for the Good of their new-modell'd Government, and the first Voyage should be made in Quest of Women, to perpetuate it by way of Generation, lest the Want of Assistants from that Sex, should, in Process of Time, render it extinct by a Failure of Succession.

Nor was Forsune averse to their Defires, the Ship foon return'd with a Cargo of Ladies. "Tis true, their Complexion was none of the faired, but Necessity takes up with every Thing; and when they were weary of thele, 'twas in their Power to have more at the same Price. it being the Custom of the Islands, and of that part of the Continent of Africa which lay near, to batter for Wives as they do for Gattel, and you might as eafily purchase a young Virgin of her Parents, as a Tooth of Ivory, both being the Commodities and Merchandize of those Countries, only here layathe Difference. anninions,

mi

ble

Co

Par

W

had

Eff

pra wi pe

bra

he

in

Bo

M

re

by

fe

of

h fu

PS

Difference, the Lady was of less Value than the Tooth.

Thus Capt. Avery and his Adherence, meeting with all they could in Reason defire in that part of the World where they liv'd, refolv'd to make their conflant Refidence, and by Force or Perswasion, oblige several Europeans to partake in the Fortunes of their new-structur'd Commonwealth; and in a little Time Fame so affifted their Intentions, that feveral Pirates of all Nations came to fettle themselves under his Protection, and he faw himself in Possession of a Government larger than he could have imagin'd in the Infancy of his Adventures.

By this Accession of Strength, he not only enlarg'd his Territories, but made all the neighbouring Princes his Tributaries. Towns were built, Communities establish'd, Fortifications built, and Entrenchments slung up, as render'd his Dominions minions impregnable and inacceffible by Sea and Land; and tho' Commadore Warren came into those Parts with a Squadron of Men of War, to drive 'em from thence, he had the Mortification to fee fuch Efforts not only hazardous, but impracticable, and to return Home without any other Effect, than difperfing a Pardon, which was embrac'd by few of the Captain's Adherents, because their Commander in Chief was excepted.

ld

le

id

e-ie

ď

le

2-

11 es

V

e

5

But as in all Constitutions and Bodies Politick, there are still some Members that compose it, of different Inclinations, and who, fway'd by Ambition, or byafs'd by Difaffection, think themselves capable of commanding the whole, and highly injur'd while they are made fubservient to a Power that is fuperior to 'em; fo it was with de Sale, who, not being content to be second, lost his Life, with his Expedations, while he was attempting to be first. This no

per M

Re

tal

of G

tu

ge

10 ot

hi esti Do po di la resis

4

4

4

This Man was a brave and daring Officer, but not being content that Avery had not only spar'd his Life, when he first made him his Prisoner, but also advanc'd him to be his Vice-roy, as it were, and the next in Command under him, he resolv'd to return those Acts of Mercy and Compassion, with the highest Injustice and Cruelty.

The Lady that fell to his Share for a Help-mate, was neither beautiful, like Capt. Avery's, nor of high Extraction, and he could not cast an Eye on the one, without having the utmost Aversion for the other. He made use of all the little Artifices he could, to make the other's Lady acquainted with his Passion, but either she had too much Generofity for her Hufband's Friend and Deputy, or too little Rhowledge in the Art and Mysteries of Love, to be fehible of his Defigns, without a more formal Declaration: Whether it was Ignorance norance of Address in her, it is nothing to our Purpose; the more innocent the appear'd to the Frinch-Man, she seem'd ttill Mistress of the more Charms; and he took Resolutions to enjoy her, that were as ta-tal as his Love was criminal.

ng

at

Fe,

0-

be

10 le

of

le

e iof

t

-

e

e

O

The Captain's Absence from the Place of his usual Abode, on the Assairs of his Government, gave the Villain an Opportunity of being more fedulous in his Addresses, and he laid hold of it with an Eagernels that shew'd how impatient he was of any Delay, as he took Time by the Forelock in the following manner. As the Violence of his Passion had made him resohate and intrepid, to the Despair of fuceceding in his Amours by fair Means, made him wholly intent how to accomplish his Defires by foul, whatfoever should be the Confequence: But first he thought it a piece of Diferetion, to feel the Pulle of his Country-Men the French, to whom he id dress'd himself by way of Complaint, re lating to "the Tyranny of the Engli who would Lord it over em in a ftrang "manner, unless Methods were speedil "apply'd, to prevent their exorbitant In "create of Power. He told them, that is was but too villate to those who would unake any Briguity into his past and pre-fent Conduct, that Avery aim'd at a de-" spotical and arbitrary Government "That fuch Deligns were definitive of the very Being of their Settlement ! That

VI

na

fiv

M

th

fa

to 82

110 fh

th

Th

0 fe

to

h

"it behov'd every well-meaning Person, es-"pecially those of the French Nation, who "had been fo long as'd to Conquelts, to "thake off a Yoke that would never be "got rid of, without their immediate ta-" king Advantage of the Captain's Absence: "That it was their Turn to relieve the "Guard, and do Duty at the Castle that "Day, and they at this very Juncture not "only had it in their Power to deliver "themselves from approaching Slavery, but "making Terms with their Prince, whom " they had highly offended by transgressing "the Law of Nations, in taking fuch unlawful Courses as they were forc'd to under their present Circumstances : That "all the Riches of Avery, which were inconceivably great, were lodg to in the Caffle they were going to be poffered of, and that besides those Riches, they might have immense Treasures from the Mogul, in recuing his Grand-daughter, the Princels, from her unjust Confinement, and delivering her into his Hands, which might be done by a due Capitulation. To conclude, he conjured cm, by the Honour of their Country, and the Refpeet they bore to thim, their Commanand Leagues with em, to thew them " lelves Men, in order to be pollets drof fo glorious a Reward; and for his part, he would not only lead em on, but would be the last that should see em on Board their

"their own Vessel again; in their Return." Home, after the Prosecution of so noble.

" and equitable a Delign.

ef.

ho

to be ta-

ce:

he

at ot

er

ut

m ıg

1-

1-

it

E

C

f, r

1

Lich

The Prospect of Gain, the Hopes of having their Pardons, and the Return to their native Soil, were Arguments too perswafive not to make Impressions upon the Minds of Men, who, being accustom d to the Acis of Barbarity, made no Scruple of falling into Measures that were consonant to it; wherefore they jointly, one and all agreed to live and die with their Commander, and as soon as the Watch-Bell should sound, after their being possess of the Castle, to fall to, and plunder all they should find in their Way, and neither spare Man, Woman, or Child, but the Princess and her Family.

But here, as before at Jamaica, Capt. Awere s good Genius was superior to his evil, and stood by him once more, in Opposition to his Enemies, though perhaps to referve him forgreater Misfortunes, if he perfilts in the Course of Life he yet continues to take. One Pickard, of de Sale's Crew, had been very much abus'd by him, bastinadod, and under an Arrest frequently when on Board with him, belides incapable of seturning to Prance again for other Crimes, as Murder and Incest, should that of Piracy be forgiven him; wherefore, after having long fought for an Opportunity of Revenge, he could not but hug himself at the Thoughts of this, as an infallible

Meaus

1

F

T

t

t

1

f

These

Means to dispatch his Enemy. What docs he therefore do, but makes off to the Captain of the Guard, one Richardson, a Corwill-Man, and formerly Avery's Lieutenant, and acquaints him with the intended Confpiracy, giving him to understand, that tinless he took speedy Measures to prevent ft. two Hours Time would bring about Hich & Turn of Affairs as would be the unwordable Ruin of their whole Colony. Richardson, for his part, was a prudent Min, and wifely entertain'd a true Sense of the Danger which his Marter's Affairs were going to be involved in , wherefore, the first Thing he did, was, to dispatch a Mellenger to Capt. Avery, with an Account of the Premises, and to defire his speedy Return, promising not only to secure his pernicious Deputy, but not to admit any Forces to relieve the Guard in the 23.000 2300 UN Caftle.

All this was punctually performed, for the Sale coming, as his infinal Cultom was, to pay his Respects to the Princess about an Hour before the Guard was to be relieved, was immediately put under an Arrest, to his great Confusion. But as it was not emough to make a Science of his Person, without those of his Accomplices, so he was to look out for Measures suitable to this End, which was happily accomplished by his calling in a whole Ship's Crew of English, who were just come into Port with fresh Booty.

ipor-

nt,

n-

at nt

et n-

Y.

Ht

fe

75 cis

e-

Thefe he dispos'd in such a manner with those which he had before in Garrison, so as when the Relief should come upon the Parade, to furround emion every fide, and either make em Priloners, or cut em entirely off; but as Villains, never so desperate in their horrid Contrivances, have a cowardly Disposition of Soul when they come to Action, so these, when they saw themselves encompass d, and commanded to lay down their Arms, or expect no Quarter, made Choice to submit to the Laws of Necessity, and were hurry'd to Pri-Ion without any manner of Reliffance. where they are to stay 'till the Captain's and his Council's Arrival, who were to pals Sentence upon 'em answerable to their Dementation of a database in mission

This was no sooner done, but the News of it spread over the whole Island, and not a French-Man could be seen in it, but was in Danger of his Life from the Indignation those of other Nations had conceived against em; and had it not been for an Order that was island out upon Avery's Arrival, to preventisch inconsiderate and cruel Proceedings, they had found themselves wholly extinct by a general Massacre.

But Forms of Justice were to be made use of even among those People, whose way of Living shew diem conversant with nothing but Injustice; and de Sale and his Accomplices were brought upon their Try-als, where, being found guilty, they were als, where, being found guilty, they were

A

M

h

h C P

every Man condemn'd to be empal'd afive, and their Estates confiscated for the Use of the Government: Which severe Execution was accordingly put in Practice, without any Remorse on the side of the unhappy Persons, that while they were made the Objects of other Folks Terror, shew'd no other Concern under their Susteings, than for their Villanies not being prosperous.

As Plots are for the Use and Confirmation of Governments, when unsuccessful, so was this highly to the Advantage of the Captain and his new Dignity, for not only vast Riches sell to him by the Forseiture of these Conspirators, but the great Council of the Island agreed, one and all, to pass such wholesome Acts in his Favour, as rais'd him to a Pitch of Sovereignty not any ways inserior to the Greatest Potentates.

Twas not only made high Treason to contrive against his Person, but to speak little of his Authority; and he saw himfelf invested with a Power as despotick as one of the most arbitrary Principles could wish for, or the highest Ambition could have in View. But as, amidst all the Prosperities of Life, Reflexions on the short Duration of it will sometimes intervene, and the Inclinations of Mankind are not fo funk in Vice, as to admit no Thoughts that border upon Vertue, so the Captain could not but lean after a Prospect of his own native Country, and the Defire of finishing Y20V3

of

H

ut

he

10 in

a-

e

t

i

1

finishing the Remainder of his Days where he first had the Happiness of seeing the Light, which was increased by looking into his past Grimes, and a just Survey of what he must one Day answer for at a Heavenly Tribunal, tho he found himself out of the Reach of one that was Earthly.

These Considerations, which he found himself more and more subject to, induc'd him to make Application to the English Company trading to the East Indies, for Pardon; and having an Opportunity by one of their Ships, which was then brought in, and which he order'd to be immediately releas'd with great Civilities, he wrote the following Letter to Capt. Pitts, the Governor of Fort & George.

and to be presented to the Covered of or o'ce " HE Bearer can teffify my Respects to the Company, by bringing you "this; and whatever my Demeaner has been to other Nations, you may always Frest affur d of my particular Deference to my own. Nothing lies more at Heart " on my fide, than that I have given Oc-" casion for her Majesty's Subjects former-" ly to complain of me; but as I have it " in my Power to make ample Amends; " fo I am nowaready to do ity after what "manner thall be thought convenient. "provided Intry be fuffer'd to return Home " to my own Country in Safety, with fuch "Effects as shall be thought needful. The "Necessities of the War, in all Probability, may. may make a Proposal of some Missions of Money, not altogether unacceptable: "And the I am capable of maintaining my telf where I am, against whatsever "Power can be brought against me, yet my Distribute of Things that are unjust, "and my Inclination to do my own Country Service, as well as close my Eyes in it, are so prevalent with me, as "to make me define your good Offices in this Affair, and tell you, that I am, "with all imaginable Respect, Sir,"

"Your most obedient Servant,

This Letter, according to Request, was transmitted into England, but whether the East India Company thought it not adviseable to be presented to the Government, or the Ministry took no Notice of it, is an Asian too despicable, and direct coming to Terms with a Prater and Robel, as well as Violator of the Lawsof Marions, it is not in my Power tookstemine; for he had no mainer of Answer took and was dest to take such Measures which were such as not to render him contemptible.

But to return to Madagafear p without making kinquiry into our ratefactions at Home. This remarkable diverance of the Captain from the Machinations of his kinemies, not only gave being to a Law, That all French Men whatfoever should depart

THRY

100 on

CI

en

10 th

10 go

CÖ

W

Ro

th

in

W

10 fo

F

713

e:

hg

er

ct

A,

n

y

13

n

1

part that Mand, but occasion'd Refolinia ons in Avery and his Council, to perfue em to Death wheresoever they should find 'em. And accordingly a Fleet was equipp'd to obstruct their Commerce, and destroy their Settlements in the North part of that Hand which was effected with that Vi gor and Celerity, that all the Relifance could be made by the Enemy, could not withstand em; and they return'd from Port St. Mary (for that was the chief Place the French East India Company had been in Possession of ever fince the Year 1664) with upwards of two Millions in Plate lewels, and other valuable Commodities a fourth Part of which fell to the Captain's Share, according to the Conflictution of his Government.

Thus he grew in Wealth, as he grew in Years, and scarce a Week pass'd without forme new adventitious Booty; for that if Money could purchase his Pardon and fafe Return, he had wherewithal to reduce France, notwithstanding their coining their Flate, without any farther Taxes upon the Subject; and he had nothing thort of the Regal Authority, but a Right to exercise it: For the Fame of his Adventures had brought all manner of People to live under his Government; and he not only cound Money with his own Impress upon it, but took upon him the Stile, in his Edicts and Declarations, that is to be made use of by Sovereign Princes. And he not only bent the the French out of their Dominions in that Island, but, to gratify his Ambition by not having any Thing like a Competitor, wag'd War with the King of the Country, that so handsomely receiv'd him at his first coming to it, and having reduc'd him, makes him now live under the Denomination of a Subject.

ror and Celeraty and ton But as has been faid before, all Governments are infecure, that are founded upon Violence and Rapine, and tho' he had been preserv'd from the Attempts of his pretended Friends, he had all imaginable Reason to make use of Means to defend himself from his open and avow'd Enemies ; nor was he fuch a Stranger to the Affairs of Europe, how romote soever he was from the Confines of it, not to foresee that Attempts would be made to dislodge him from thence on every fide, at the Conclusion of s general Peace : ideatherefore fet himfelf st work to regulate, arm, and disciple his Militia, and having form d them into leveral Regiments, found them to make fifteen thousand effective Men.

His Preparations at Sea were nothing behind these at Land, and he saw himself Matier of more than forty. Velids of War, from sevent, to thary fix Guns, that could be laid up on Occasion in a Bason that was defended by a Mole and a hundred

Pieces of Campon, in one paid to apply

The Forts were likewife kept in Repair, and fuch additional Works added to ent tak pu

ble

fy?

Re

III

23

th

le

tu

le

fa

W

nat

by

Dr,

y, rft

n,

a-

n-

n

n

1-

n

IF

as might defeat all the Measures should be taken against him, and every Thing was put into such a Posture, as not only enabled him to repel Force by Force, but defy'd the Approach of an Enemy within Reach of 'em.

To go farther than this, would be to impose upon the Veracity of the Relators, as well as the Belief of the Reader, because the Person that gives him these Memoirs, left the Captain when he first made Overtures for Pardon; wherefore we shall release him from any farther Enquiries, by a faithful and true Account of the Country which he is now possess do not and which he may take as follows.

A ADAGASCAR, or St. Lawrence's I VI fland, fo call'd because discover'd on that Day; and, according to fome. from Laurence, a Portuguese, who discovered ibin 1906 The French in the Reign of Henryesher With cell d strong Dauchine's 1 fland. It is suppos de tenbe the Minuthias of Prolomy, and the Corner & thiopia of Pliey. It lies in the Arbiepian Sea, and points Welmard towards Zanguebar and the Cafres? on the Coast of Africk. This about 50 lesignes in length, yandisower ordonis Bread they be de under the EntriduZones and the Expides of Capriding but hath about dance of Capes, and most of them cover'd with Citron and Orange, or Borny-Trees, and others, whose Wood is specked. The Rocks gar

Pit

Ar

fo :

inf

the

the

are thr

oft

del

Na

up

no

gre

w

of

W

ex

an

T!

an

ro

ex

W

pe

m

ca

317

Pe

Rocks are of excellent white Marlile, whence flows the best and purelt Water in the World. The Country is divided into many Provinces; but those towards the North, are unknown to the Europeans. Their Villages are compos'd of moveable Houses, such as four Men can carry. Their Towns are encompass'd with Pales, and a deep Ditch six or seven Foot wide, and their Houses built of Planks. The Air is extreme hot, and they have never any Snow nor Ice.

Here are feveral Mines of Iron and fine Steel. They have some Mines of Gold, but it is very pale. Most Sorts of precious Stones are to be found in their Rivers; and they have Store of excellent Honey, sweater and harder than ours, resembling Sugar. They make Wine or Mead of Honey, which is the most common; Wine of Sugar, and a Sort, of Cyder. They extract Oil from several Plants, Fruits, Note, and Grains, and have a Sort of Earth as good as the Terra Sigillars of Limnos.

Here grows abundance of white Pepper, and precious odoriferous Wood of divers Golours. They have also Score of Canes of a wast Height and Thickness, tail and mound; of which they make Pots, Bottles, Violins, and Harps, Boats that will hold two Persons, and Sedans, and take Gare to give them a certain Bent, when young, to render em fit for their Purpose. These Canes, which they call Banbaches, have a Pith Pith within, much esteem'd by the Indians, Arabians, and Persians, and call'd the Sugar of the Bamba's, or Bamboches.

1CC

he

a-

b.

il-

s,

115

ep

II

-

W

le

It

S

1

They have a very good Tobacco, and alfo a Sort of Hemp; whose Leaves they use instead of it, which being chew'd, makes them fall alleep, and afterwards renders them extraordinary chearful; but such as are not accustom'd to it, it makes mad for three or four Days. The Inhabitants are often incommoded with Locusts, which destroy all their Corn and Fruits; but the Natives gather up the Locusts, and feed upon them. Here are no great Plenty of notione Animals, except Crocadiles, and great Serpents without Poison.

The Natives are of two Sorts, black and white; the latter, by their Names and Customs, seem to be of Fewish Extract. All of 'em go naked, but cover their Pudenaa. Women of Quality have some slight Habit extraordinary. The Men buy their Wives, and keep as many as they can maintain. The Men are courageous, and despite Death; and their Arms are Javelins, Bows and Arrows. The Women are very discreet, and extreamly virtuous. Their Language and Writing resembles the Arabick. Their Paper is yellow, very smooth, and fine, being made of the inner Rind of a certain Tree, call'd Avo. Their Ink is a fort of Gum. made of a Tree call'd Arandranto, and their, Pens made of Cane. They believe in one God, the Creator of Heaven and Earth, who rewards the Good, and punishes the Bad: They call him Zankarre, and facrifice to him, but without Temples. They own also, that there are good and evil Angels, and are mightily afraid of the Devil; and in all their Sacrifices, they throw the Devil the first Bit, to pacify him. Their Priests are usually Magicians, and give em Spells and Charms to prevent Mischief from the Devil. They live in Hords, like the Tartars, under one Chief, whom they call Tichich: Which Authority is many times usurp'd by him who is most powerful. The latest Relation from this Island, informs us, that the Princes are govern'd by petty Princes or Grandees, and the People are divided into several Ranks; the' all these Princes, fince the Reduction of the Island by Capt. Avery, are under his Obedience. When the Grandees visit one another, he who receives the Visit, prostitutes his handsomest Wife to the other: And the common People entertain their Friends and Strangers in the fame Manner. Their Grandees are much delighted with Comedies. Their Comedians, whom they call Secalfes, shave theinselves close, and act in the Habit of Women, and play their Part in a Farce divertingly enough.

The Air here is generally very temperate, and exceeding wholsome. The opposite Place on the Globe to Madagascar, is, the South Part of California. The Soil is extraordinary fruitful, in many places affording

all

the

ecri-

hey

An-

vil:

the heir

em

om,

the

nes

he

115, ty

re

fe

d

all Things necessary for the Life of Man in great Plenty. The longest Day in the North Parts, is about 13 Hours and half, and the shortest in the South 9 Hours and three quarters, and the Nights proportionably.

The chiefelt Commodities of this Place. are, Rice, Hides, Wax, Gums, Christal, Steel, Copper, Ebony, and Wood of all forts. Towards the Eastern Part of this Island, is a pleasant and fertil Valley, call'd Ambonse. which is stock'd with feveral rich Mines of Iron and Steel, and yields great Store of the Oil of Sejanum. Near to the same Valley, is an excellent Medicinal Well of hot Water, which proves a ready Cure for cold Distempers in the Limbs. In the same Neighbourhood, is an high Mountain, on whose Top is a remarkable Spring of very falt Water, tho' upwards of thirty Leagues from the Sea. In the Southern Parts are most forts of Mineral Waters, very different both in Colour, Tafte, and Quality, and some Places afford large Pits of Ritumen. In this Island is also a River, whose Gravel is so exceeding hot, that there's no treading upon it, and yet the Water of that River is extream cold.

Divers fingular Customs prevail in several Parts of this Island, particularly these two; first, if any Woman be deliver'd of a live Child, and afterwards die in Childbed, the living Child is bury'd with the dead Mother, being better (say they) that the Child should die, than live, having no Mother.

Mother to look after it. The other is, their exposing their Children to wild Beasts, if brought forth upon an unlucky Day, (as they term it) or during some unfortunate Aspects of the Planets, as their Priests pretend to tell them; and so numerous are those Days they term unlucky, that almost one half of the Year is accounted such; which is the Reason the Island is so thinly stocked with Inhabitants.

The Language here us'd, is barbarous; almost every Province has no peculiar Dialect, yet not so different, but that they understand one another; so that the Natives of this Island may be faid to have but one Tongue in common among 'em all.

From the foregoing Description, may be concluded what a mighty Advantage it would be to the Crown of Great Britain, if Means could be found out by our Superiors, either to impress these Pirates by Force, and so get Possession of this wealthy Island, or by Compliance with such Advances as have been made by their Chief towards his Pardon, which must reminate in an entire Surrendry of a Country that not only abounds with fo many ufefur Commodities, but, by its Extent and Strength, will add to the Renown of the Brinish Arms, which, from fuch an Accommodation, must thine with as great a Lustre in Africa, as they have lately done in Europe.